

U BOAT CAPTAIN SORRY HE HAD TO SINK LEELANAW

Knew Nothing About Wilson's
Latest Note on Submarine Warfare.

TREATED CREW WELL.

American Ship Was Sixth
Sent to Bottom That Day
by the Submarine.

ABERDEEN, via London, July 28.—

"They could not have treated us more courteously than they did," was the unanimous verdict of Capt. Eugene Delk and the members of the crew of the American steamer Leelanaw when questioned regarding their encounter with a German submarine. They travelled about sixty miles on the deck of the submarine and became well acquainted with its crew, several of whom had been in America.

One member of the Leelanaw's crew remained aboard the submarine at his own request. He was one of the mess boys of the American ship and as he was of German nationality, preferred joining the crew of the underwater craft to the probability of internment in England. At Kirkwall another of the Leelanaw's mess boys was found to be a German and was detained.

Capt. Delk, a resident of Philadelphia, made a matter-of-fact statement regarding the sinking of his ship and was not inclined to add details to the main facts as he outlined them.

"There is no story in it," he said, "we stopped when a shot was fired behind us and then we had to leave. Our ship was shelled, bombed and torpedoed, but it took an hour and a half to sink her. The Germans took us aboard the submarine, carried us about sixty miles and then gave us directions for getting to Kirkwall, which we reached safely in about twelve hours."

The members of the crew, of whom there are thirty-two besides the captain, explained that the German commander apologized for the necessity of sinking the ship, but said it was forced upon him by the fact that the Leelanaw was carrying contraband and he was not in the habit of throwing overboard contraband cargoes. The crew of the German boat conversed affably in good English with the Leelanaw's men.

The Germans had no idea of the contents of the latest American note on the sinking of the Lusitania, for their newspapers were two days old. The Leelanaw was the sixth vessel the submarine had sunk that day, and it started in pursuit of two others when the Americans had returned to their boats after their long ride on the submarine's deck.

The sailors from the Leelanaw were cold and wet when they landed after their twelve hours' row in lifeboats, as they had been almost swamped several times in cross tides off the Orkney Islands. They will leave today for Dundee, where their statements will be taken by the United States Consul.

The crew of the Leelanaw will sail for New York next Saturday on board the steamer St. Paul.

Leelanaw Was Flying U. S. Flag When Sunk.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Ambassador Page to-day forwarded a report by the British Admiralty on the sinking of the American steamer Leelanaw by a German submarine off the Orkney Islands last Sunday.

The Admiralty reported that the Leelanaw was flying the American flag when overtaken and that the crew had plenty of time to take to the boats, which were towed sixty miles until a strange vessel was sighted.

DRUG OWNERS ARE HELD.

Tango Specialists Face Federal as Well as State Prosecution.

George Bennett and his wife, May, tango specialists, were held by Magistrate Deuel in Yorkville Court to-day on charges of keeping $4,000 worth of narcotics in their apartment in the King James Hotel, in West Forty-fifth Street, where they were arrested last yesterday. Bennett, also charged with keeping a revolver, was held in $2,500 bail. His wife was held in $500. She was in a state of collapse for the need of drugs.

Agent Lewis of the Department of Justice had Federal warrants for the pair, charging the manufacture of opium, an offense punishable by five years in prison. The warrants will be served upon them when the city authorities are through with them.

ITALIAN ARMIES NEARING GORIZIA; TAKE HIGH RIDGES

Austrian Grip on the Key to Isonzo River Is Nearly Broken.

TAKE 3,200 PRISONERS.

Both Sides Suffer Terribly
From Fighting in Temperature of 100 Degrees.

ROME, July 28.—In a series of spectacular night battles, the Italians have captured one position after another around Gorizia. Despatches received here to-day repeated the rumor that the Austrians were preparing to vacate the fortress city, though War Office dispatches offered no confirmation.

The Austrians still hold the heights of Podgora, dominating Gorizia from the west, and are pouring down a heavy fire on Bersaglieri attempting to storm their trenches. The fighting here is of most desperate character and despatches agree that the Italians have suffered heavy losses.

For more than a fortnight the fighting has occurred under most oppressive weather conditions, the temperature ranging above 90 and often above 100 degrees. Night offers but little relief and both armies are becoming exhausted in the terrific struggle.

Several of the more important of the ridges of the Carso plateau are now held by the Italians. Monte Sei Busi and Monte San Michele have been captured, the Bersaglieri and Alpini combining in the attack and taking several hundred prisoners.

The text of the War Office statement is as follows:

"In the Alpone Valley we now are in full possession of the heights of the right slope, having occupied Monte Lavanech and the Piasona crest. From points dominating the opposite slope the enemy's artillery attempted to hinder our operations, but without success. After a long preparation by artillery of medium calibre, the enemy attacked with several detachments of infantry during the night of the 26th. Although supported by numerous machine guns, these troops were repulsed."

"In the Monte Nero region the struggle continues unabated notwithstanding a fog which prevents the artillery from assisting in the operations."

"At Plava the second operation undertaken to enlarge the bridgehead is developing favorably."

"On the Carso plateau the battle continued yesterday. Our troops advanced along the whole front with great dash and boldness, conquering toward the left wing a strong position on San Michele commanding the greater part of the plateau. After being subjected to a violent cross fire from the enemy's artillery of all calibres, our forces were obliged to fall back below the crest where they are maintaining their positions. On the centre we progressed toward San Martino, carrying with the bayonet trenches and a redoubt covering it."

"On the right wing, by the perfect timing of an infantry advance with the supporting fire of artillery, we completed at nightfall the conquest of a position on Monte Dei, driving out inch by inch the enemy, who was strongly entrenched there. We made about 3,200 prisoners, including one lieutenant-colonel and forty-one other officers. We took five machine guns, two small cannon, trench mortars, quantities of rifles, ammunition, war materials and food as trophies of a day of fierce fighting."

BRITISH SHOT DOWN THEIR OWN AIRSHIP

Territorials Proved Good Marksmen, but the Aviator Didn't Appreciate the Feat.

SOUTHEND, England, July 16 (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Two companies of territorials stationed near here brought down an aeroplane with rifle fire early this week, but they are not doing any boasting over their feat, for the victim proved to be a British army machine.

They were guarding Canpey Island and had instructions to shoot at any aviator flying over the island without giving an agreed signal. The victim of their marksmanship either did not know this rule or ignored it, and when he got within range a volley was fired at him. One of the bullets punctured the aeroplane's gasoline tank and the aviator was compelled to alight.

When the territorials ran up to complete their triumph by taking the aviator prisoner they were greeted with a volley of strong language. The profanity was unmistakable English. The commanding officer of the territorials attempted to assuage his wrath by pointing out that he had served as the means of not only testing the shooting of the territorials, but had proved that an aeroplane could be brought down by rifle fire. But the aviator refused to play gracefully the role of a vicarious target and departed, swearing vengeance.

Half-Portion Stockings Startle the Fishes With One-Piece Bathing Suit of 1915 Girl

The Humble, Modest Bloomer Is Seen No More; Tights or Pantalettes Have Supplanted It, and the Skirt Is Little More Than a Ruffle Attached to the Waist—This Year the Tired Business Man Is Not Spending His Vacation in the Mountains.

Where Is the Bathing Suit Going to Stop, With the Abbreviation Below and the Increasing Decolletage Above?—The Only Logical Answer Is "Where Eve Began."

By Marguerite Moores Marshall.

Where is the bathing suit going to stop? No definite answer has yet been found to this interesting question, but if the bathing suit keeps up its present gait it seems destined to stop where Eve began. Something very like the fig-leaf era has already been reached by the beach girls this summer, in the opinion of certain disapproving—and approving—male critics.

Perhaps the bare-legged ladies who promenaded on a glass bridge in a Broadway art institute last winter are responsible for the exiguously clad mermaids of the present season. Perhaps Dame Fashion relied on torrid weather to excuse her 'orrid assault upon the canons of modesty. Perhaps the abbreviated nether garments are but the flowering of that feminine logic which exists, though all men deny it, and which said complacently last spring, "street dresses and ball dresses are ten inches shorter than usual—bathing dresses shall be likewise!"

Anyway, Daddy Neptune—if he is like other front-row daddies—must be having the treat of his immortal and not excessively Puritanical life. At that, he has nothing on the life guards, beach cops and various amateur guardians of public morality who are watching the female bathing population around Manhattan just now. To say that said population has nothing on would be going too far or, at least, too fast. But it is obvious that the bathing girl of 1915 wants but little here below nor wants that little long.

Every Monday morning this month there have been tales—some of them illustrated—of sea-going Flora MacFlimsies who were requested politely to return to their bathing houses by blushing policemen. Yesterday the artist and I decided that we'd see how much, or how little, there was in it—the bathing suit of 1915. So we investigated at M. Aron's on Fifth Avenue and two or three other smart shops, then hurried to a beach where the suit might be observed, so to speak, in action. We came, we saw, we concurred. The season's surf suit is a cross between a ball gown and a circus costume.

To begin with, it displays what is probably the shortest skirt ever worn in this climate by an adult female of the Caucasian race—footlight fashions excepted. The intelligent reader will deduce almost instantly that other things besides the skirt are displayed. But never mind now about that, or them. It is the skirt which is under consideration, which has been under consideration from the sands, from the hotel piazza, from the porch of the tired business man's summer cottage.

It's a little thing to make so much trouble. It doesn't reach even to the knees of its wearer. On many suits, at least, it has none of that excessive fulness which, artists say, destroys the beautiful natural lines of the human figure. The sternest censor of the deep damnation of the taking-off must admit that there is one charge which cannot be brought against the bathing suit of 1915. It does nothing, nothing at all, to the beautiful natural lines of the human figure. Not a line is omitted, or even blurred.

Of course, there are human figures in which beautiful lines are scarce. But the bathing suit of to-day plays no favorites; the unbecoming lines are allowed just as much prominence as any others. The suit undoubtedly does not obscure a diving Venus; it renders equally conspicuous the woman who is built on the plan of a barrel buoy and whose color scheme is not dissimilar, with her scarlet cap, face and neck topping the popular black one-piece suit.

FURIOUS CHARGES MADE BY GERMANS AROUND SOUCHEZ

Repulsed at All Points Save
One, Says Paris War Office.

PARIS, July 28.—The battle for the trench country around Souchez was resumed by the Germans, after a lull of nearly a week, in three furious charges during the night. An official communiqué this afternoon admitted that the enemy penetrated the French trenches at one point, but only on a twenty-yard front.

The infantry onslaught was preceded by a heavy artillery bombardment that tore away sections of the French wire entanglements. The Germans then charged in three simultaneous pushes at different points on the French line. Excepting the slight loss admitted by the War Office, the enemy's attacks were repulsed.

Following is the text of the War Office report: "In Artois, to the north of Souchez, the Germans, after a strong bombardment, delivered last night several different attacks against three of our positions. After a very spirited combat they were driven out of the trenches which they had succeeded in occupying, with the exception of one point where they retained twenty yards of a saphead in advance of our front. The town of Souchez was bombarded yesterday evening."

In the Artois, in the vicinity of Fontaine-aux-Charmes, the enemy undertook to make an attack, but they were driven back to their trenches by our infantry fire. "In the Dardanelles there is nothing to report, with the exception of some slight progress on the part of our troops on our right wing, together with activity by French aviators, who bombarded successfully the new aviation camp of the enemy to the north of Chanak. They threw bombs on the hangars and on a gasoline supply station, causing a considerable outbreak of flames."

Imagination, which is more than the nineteen-fifteen bathing girl will do. As for fetching color schemes and trimmings, all authorities are agreed that this season's costumes have never been equalled. The bathing caps, hats and hoods are nothing less than millinery, trimmed with artificial flowers, bows and stickups. One black rubber cap which I noted had a red heart neatly applied over the fair wearer's temple. Many of the suits are faced at the sides, the lines of eyelet holes and lacings contrasting vividly with the body of the shoe. The costly suits are developed in at least two different colors, and the cheaper ones have brilliant Roman-striped saashes.

Verily and forsooth the mountains are no place for the tired business man to spend his vacation this year.

WHO COULD HAVE TAKEN MOVIE FILM OF FORT?

Mystery in Advertisement for Lost
Picture Negative of Interior of Fortress.

That some one is seeking possession of a moving picture negative of the interior of one of New York's fortresses which apparently was either lost or stolen or is indulging in a peculiar form of press agentry or joking as indicated in an advertisement which appeared in The World and other papers this morning. The advertisement follows:

So far as the Government and army officials here know there have been no motion picture negatives made of New York fortresses with the consent of the Government. Agents of the Government here deny they are responsible for inserting the advertisement, and if the individuals who did insert it are sincere in their quest it is said the negative must have been obtained without the consent of the officials.

GIRL RESCUING BOY FROM AUTO BREAKS ARM FOURTH TIME

Young Torchbearer of Y. W.
C. A. Canipfire Girls a Confirmed Heroine.

Miss Hazel Christian is at her home, No. 350 Twelfth Street, Brooklyn, receiving the congratulations of her friends on the manner in which her right arm was broken Monday for the fourth time in her seventeen years. Monday and a year ago the arm was broken in saving little boys from being run down by automobiles at the risk of her own life.

Miss Christian is torchbearer of Keshikone Camp of the Young Women's Christian Association Canipfire Girls. In Camp Ellsworth, at Narragansett, N. Y., last year she won two swimming prizes, $10 in gold and a silver cup, and she has won her way near to the tennis championship of the club.

"I suppose," she said to an Evening World reporter to-day, "that I get into such things as this because my outdoor habits have got me into the habit of doing things quickly and taking chances."

With a friend Miss Christian was walking on Prospect Park West Monday afternoon when she saw Louis Mann, ten years old, lagging along behind his mother in the middle of the street. Mrs. Mann did not know the youngster was not at her heels. A big automobile, with the chauffeur as the only occupant, was coming up behind them. Miss Christian saw that the mother knew that she was safely out of the way and did not see that Louis was directly in the path of the car and was trying to run the other way.

Miss Christian sprang into the street, swung the boy to safety and leaped backward. A wheel of the car passed over her arm, breaking it above the wrist.

It was by an almost similar rescue of six-year-old Lester Samuelson from an automobile in Reeves Place a year ago that Miss Christian broke her arm the third time. For this she received the National Honor of the Canipfire Association. The first two times the arm was broken by a tumble in the playground of the Manual Training High School, of which she is a graduate, and by falling downstairs at home.

GIRLS TAKE LONG HIKE WHILE POLICE SEARCH

Walk Through Long Island for a Week and Say They Like the Life.

Harriet Ring, seventeen years old, of No. 25 Janes Avenue, Elmhurst, and Zella Lachter of Dr. Harbor Road and Woodhaven Avenue, Elmhurst, returned to their homes to-day after being absent since Thursday morning. Their parents had searched for them and the police had sent out a general alarm for them.

The girls said they started for a walk without intending to do more than a few miles. They kept walking along the north shore of Long Island and found it too late to return that night, so they slept in a wood. The next morning they continued their wanderings and liked the life so much they kept it up. They visited Centereport and Huntington, swung around through Nassau County and reached East New York, which they did not like, and from there walked to Coney Island yesterday and spent the night walking home. They obtained food at farm houses and always slept in the open.
